"Wayfare" in the Nation this week remarks: Advices from Germany, so far the front as they exist, do not. I think, suggest that the German Gevernment is ready to make a proposition of peace or that she has made one. They rather point to move ments of opinion which, in their turn, show an increasing desire for a settlement. Some observers, for example, think it significant that leaflets are put about in large numbers in the towns with appeals such as We want peace. We must have peace, and that the police abstain from seizing them. Others, again, point to the serious effect of the scantiness of fat foods on the health and nerves of the women and children. The surface unity and determination remain great, and the political atmosphere shows little change; but it does not harden—witness the indirect advance to Belgium, whose reality after the Curron mission and the counter of the Allies can hardly be denied. On of the whole, the hopes of peace do not receive. Nor is the Russian victory of Erzecum likely to retard thom."

At last, after the National Insurance porter porter.

At last, after the National Insurance Act has been in operation for over three years, we have been told something definite regarding its financial results. Even now the figures given only cover the first of January, 1914. In that period the insured persons paid into the Exchequer over 22 million pounds, of which sum about 141 millions went in benefits and working expenses, while twelve millions was invested by the National Debt Commissioners. These figures are a little less was invested by the National Debt Commissioners. These figures are a little less satisfactory than they look at first sight, because while the premiums were being paid over the whole eighteen months the benefits were only extended over twelve months. Still, but for the war, the condition of the Insurance Fund would have been quite sound. What the effect of the war has been upon it remains to be sold when the figures for 1914 15 are available.

No one who traverses London streets with his eyes open will be surprised to learn that there has been a great diminution in the number of licensed vehicles. Taxicals have diminished from '7.74b before the war to 5.813 to-day-a decrease of 25 per cent.; and house cabs from 3.77b to 2.77b-a decrease of over 30 per cent. The full story of the capture of Erzerum is eagerly awaited. It is certain that the Russian Army was equipped with very powerful siege artillery. The Russian guns must have battered down the Erzerum forts nearly, if not quite, as rapidly as the German artillery did the forts of Namur and Maubeuge. TO THE PEOPLE OF IRELAND. TO THE PEOPLE OF IRELAND.

At the very commencement of the war I made an appeal to the Irish people, and especially to the young men of Ireland, to mark the profound change which has been brought about in the relations of Ireland to the Empire by whole-heartedly supporting the Allies in the field. I pointed out that at long last, after centuries of misunderstanding, the democracy of Great Britain had finally and irrevocably decided to trust Ireland, and I called upon Ireland to prove that the concession of liberty would, as we had promised in your mame, have the same effect in our country as in every other portion of the nought about in the relations of Ireland to the Empire by whole-heartedly supporting the Allies in the field. I pointed out that at long last, after centuries of misunderstanding, the democracy of Great Britain had finally and irrevocably decided to trust Ireland, and I called upon Ireland to prove that the concession of liberty would, as we had promised in your name, have the same effect in our country as in every other portion of the Empire, and that henceforth Ireland would be a strength instead of a weakness. I further pointed out this was a just war, provoked by the intolerable military desposits of Germany, that it was a war in defence of the rights and liberties of small nations, and that Ireland would be false to her history and every consideration of honour, good faith, and self-interest if she did not respond to my appeal.

The following official report was issued today a huge Iriah Army in the field. Its achievements have covered Ireland with glory before the werld, and have thrilled our hearts with pride. North and South have vied with each other in springing to arms, and, please God, the sacrifices they have made side by side on the field of battle will form the surest bond of a united Iriah nation in the future. We have kept our word, we have fulfilled our trust, we have definitely accepted the position and undertaken the obligation of a self-governed unit amongst victory has been won. The gaps in the ranks of our Irish Army must be filled, not by Englishmen or Scotsmen or Welsh-men, but by Irishmen. Our gallant fellow-countrymen at the front Dur gallant fellow-countrymen at the front commissioned me to make this appeal. (bey appeal to-day through me from the trenches to farmers, labourers, artisans, and to every class of our people, not to desert them. In your name I promised them in France and Flanders that Ireland would stand by them. by them.

Will you fulfil that promise?
The task is not difficult.

Fill up the reserve battalions. Your brothers in the trenches are not only upholding the honour of Ireland before the world: they are defending Ireland itself from ruin and destruction, from murder and garrilege, from confiscation of the lands of Irish farmers, and the wrecking of the property and prosperity of every class of property and prosperity of every class of under no compulsion save that of the name of honour, justice, and religio in the name of common gratitude, and in their own highest self-interest, appeal to the young men of Ireland who are still available to form reserve battalions and to commence their training, so that in the event of the war not speedily ending they may be ready to fill every gap in the ranks of the Irish Army at the front. (Signed) J. E. REDMOND.

In the Black Sea Coast region west of Trebiscond permanent bridges were demolished by our warships and 15 sailing ships were destroyed.

by our troops are fleeing in disorder, and at many points in different directions. Severe snowstorms fail to cool the ardour in pursuit of our men, who are close on the heels of the enemy, and are annihilating or taking prisoners the tails of the Turkish columns. We captured at Erzerum the whole fortress artillery and a large part of the enemy is field artillery. Up to the present we have counted two hundred gans. At the same time we took a huge quantity of artillery munitions, and arms, several dozen motor cars, wireless apparatus, and a pontoon park.

The number of other trophies and of Turkish soldiers taken prisoners in the vast region of the Erzerum Fortress is being determined. The troops of the Caucasus Army, notwithstanding the supreme efforts demanded of them, in ceaseless fighting for over a month, ander most difficult geographical conditions, have suffered but slight loss, and are ready for fresh exploits when their Sovereign Chief gives them the order.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF RECRUITS.

WITH PREMIER.

(REUTER'S TRILEGRAM.)

ATHENS, WEDNESDAY.

Last evening's debate in Parliament on the question of the Italian troops in Corfu is variously commented upon. Entented diplomatic circles do not admit that any distinction should be made between Italy and her Allies.

The Press of all shades of opinson criticised the tone of the speech made by M. Sokolis, member for Corfu, who was called to order by the President. It also considers the Premier's reply too mild.

Count de Bossari, Italian Minister, conferred with the Premier on the subject this morning, and he will also have an audience of the King. was intended to represent somebody in Gali lipoli, or, at any rate, in the South-Eastern theatre of war. The man was lying under a tree, sodden with drink, without arms or accourtements of any kind, and clasping a big bottle of rum. The expression on his fact was that of a man sodden and helpless from drunkenness. It is a disgusting representation without any humour, continued Mr. Bodkin, it is not even merely silly, because it is offensive to a degree, because it is over the signature of an officer of His Majesty's Army. I suggest that the picture of a private drunk, and carrying a bottle of rum, is a libel upon the forces of His Majesty's Army. I suggest that the picture is a frawing by an officer of, a private who owed to him respect and obedence.

Mr. Allan Lupton, director of Messra, H. R. Baines and Co., proprietors of The Hystander, said Mr. Vivian Carter was not given notice because of the picture, or any picture.

Mr. Gordon Hewart, defending, said the prosecution was based upon an entire lack of humour. It was obviously intended to be a humorous picture. The hystander did not be a humorous picture.

Beceipta-Western Ports 1470 526 16575 15 656 TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir.—I am auxious that nurses throughout the country should learn that a scheme of vital interest to their profession is being promulgated in London at present. Nurses who are in connection with bospitals will hear of it through the boards' of management and their marrous, who have already been circularised on the subject; but I write this for the many private nurses unconnected with hospitals since their training. They often do not read nursing journals, and, therefore, are not aware that such a project is on foot. The idea of a College of Nursing has been started by the Hon. Arthur Stanley, chairman of the Joint War Committee of the British Red Cross Society and Order of St. John, and Miss Swift, matron-in-chief of the Joint War Committee. This is with the avowed intention of protecting our trained nurses and strengthening their professional standing by uniformity. I cannot possibly outline the whole scheme within the limits of this letter. I merely wish to draw the attention of trained nurses to the fact that this proposed scheme is being discussed at present in nursing circles throughout the United Kingdom, and to advise them to read about it for themselves in the various nursing journals.—Yours, etc.,
